

The Hon. Ricardo S. Martinez

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

DANIEL RAMIREZ MEDINA, Plaintiff,

v.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND
SECURITY, et al.,
Defendants.

Case No. 2:17-cv-00218-RSM-JPD

DEFENDANTS' OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION
[DKT. NO. 122]

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

Plaintiff Daniel Ramirez Medina ("Plaintiff") is challenging the Department of Homeland Security's ("DHS") decision to terminate his deferred action in the form of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals ("DACA") by issuing a Notice to Appear ("NTA") initiating removal proceedings against him. See Dkt. No. 78, Second Amend. Complaint (Count Nos. 1 & 2). Now, more than one year after originally commencing this action, and after an immigration judge has ordered him removed from the United States, Plaintiff seeks a preliminary injunction. The Court should deny Plaintiff's motion. The Court should not award Plaintiff such extraordinary relief where he has inexplicably sat on his rights numerous times over the past year, his allegations of injury are unsupported, and where he cannot show that the relief he seeks would return him to the status quo ante. The Court should also deny Plaintiff's motion because he cannot demonstrate 1 that he is likely to succeed on the merits of his claims. Indeed, while the Court may find that 2 Defendants' termination of Plaintiff's DACA falls outside U.S. Citizenship and Immigration 3 Service's ("USCIS") Standard Operating Procedures ("SOP"), Plaintiff is unable to make that 4 showing with regard to the termination of his employment authorization, nor that Defendants' 5 actions have prejudiced Plaintiff – as any additional process will not necessarily afford Plaintiff 6 advance notice and an opportunity to respond, and the result of any additional process will likely 7 be the same for Plaintiff.

8 BACKGROUND

9 Over one year ago, on February 13, 2017, Plaintiff commenced this action with a Petition 10 for a Writ of Habeas Corpus. Dkt. No. 1, and filed a first amended habeas petition and complaint 11 for declaratory and injunctive relief on February 21, 2017, which included no claims under the 12 Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"). Dkt. No. 41. Federal Agency Defendants moved to 13 dismiss. Dkt. No. 52. Plaintiff subsequently clarified that he was not challenging the decision to 14 pursue his removal by issuing a Notice to Appear ("NTA") that terminated his DACA, but was 15 only challenging his arrest and detention that occurred prior to the decision to commence 16 removal proceedings. See Dkt. No. 64 at 31-32. Relying, in part of this representation, this Court 17 issued a Report and Recommendation ("R&R") that recommended denial of the motion to 18 dismiss but that declined to recommend Plaintiff's immediate release. Id. at 45-46. The district 19 court ordered staggered briefing on objections to this R&R. Dkt. No. 67. On March 24, 2017, the 20 district court ruled that Plaintiff was not entitled to an order from the Court ordering his 21 immediate release. Dkt. No. 69. The next day, Plaintiff requested a bond hearing before an 22 immigration judge, which occurred the following day. Dkt. No. 72. At that time, the immigration 23 judge set bond, and Plaintiff was subsequently released after posting his bond. Id.

24 On April 25, 2017, the district court ordered Plaintiff to file and serve his proposed 25 Second Amended Complaint and that any "further briefing or action in connection with 26 Respondents' Objections to the Report and Recommendation is suspended, and the Clerk shall 27 remove the R&R from the Court's motion calendar." Dkt. No. 77 at ¶¶ 2, 3. As a result, briefing 28 on the objections to the R&R was never completed and this matter was rendered moot by Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint, which raised different claims than those raised in the First Amended Complaint. See Dkt. No. 78 (Prayer for Relief) (arguing the termination of Plaintiff's DACA and employment authorization document ("EAD") were in violation of the APA and seeking, inter alia, injunctive and declaratory relief in the form of reinstating his DACA and EAD, and also raising claims for individual liability for alleged constitutional torts).

Defendants moved to dismiss Plaintiff's second amended complaint on June 26, 2017, and simultaneously filed the certified administrative records for USCIS and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement ("ICE"). See Dkt. Nos. 90, 92, 93. Plaintiff voluntarily dismissed his claims against individual capacity Defendants, leaving just his claims under the APA. See Dkt. No. 112. Following a hearing, the Court denied Defendants' motion to dismiss on November 8, 2017. Dkt. No. 116. Defendants answered the second amended complaint on December 6, 2017. Dkt. No. 119.

On January 17, 2018, an Immigration Judge ordered Ramirez removed from the United States. See Dkt. No. 122 at 8. On information and belief, Plaintiff has appealed that removal order to the Board of Immigration Appeals ("BIA").

Plaintiff now asks the Court to issue a preliminary injunction restoring his DACA and employment authorization pending a decision on the merits. See Dkt. No. 122.

ARGUMENT

I. Standard of Review

"The purpose of a preliminary injunction is merely to preserve the relative positions of the parties until a trial on the merits can be held." Univ. of Texas v. Camenisch, 451 U.S. 390, 395 (1981). As a result, it is generally inappropriate at the "preliminary-injunction stage to give a final judgment on the merits." Id.; see Senate of State of Cal. v. Mosbacher, 968 F.2d 974, 978 (9th Cir. 1992) (holding that "judgment on the merits in the guise of preliminary relief is a highly inappropriate result").

An injunction is "a drastic and extraordinary remedy, which should not be granted as a matter of course." Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, 561 U.S. 139, 142 (2010). A plaintiff

1 seeking a preliminary injunction “must establish” that: (1) it is likely to succeed on the merits of 2 its claims; (2) it is likely to suffer irreparable harm absent preliminary relief; (3) the balance of 3 equities tips in its favor; and (4) an injunction is in the public interest. Winter, 555 U.S. at 20.
 4 Preliminary injunctive relief is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right, id., and the 5 party seeking such relief bears the burden of establishing the prerequisites to this extraordinary 6 remedy. Earth Island Inst. v. Carlton, 626 F.3d 462, 469 (9th Cir. 2010). In a mandatory 7 injunction request such as this, where Plaintiffs seek to order the Government to act, a moving 8 party “must establish that the law and facts clearly favor [their] position, not simply that [they] 9 [are] likely to succeed.” Garcia v. Google, Inc., 786 F.3d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 2015).

10 To fulfill the “irreparable harm” requirement, the moving party “must do more than 11 merely allege imminent harm,” but “must demonstrate immediate threatened injury.” Associated 12 Gen. Contractors of California, Inc. v. Coal. for Econ. Equity, 950 F.2d 1401, 1410 (9th Cir.
 13 1991). Delay in seeking relief may undercut the possibility of irreparable harm. Lydo Enters., 14 Inc. v. City of Las Vegas, 745 F.2d 1211, 1213 (9th Cir.1984) (citation omitted) (“[a] preliminary 15 injunction is sought upon the theory that there is an urgent need for speedy action to protect the 16 plaintiff’s rights. By sleeping on its rights, a plaintiff demonstrates the lack of need for speedy 17 action”); Isomedia, Inc. v. Spectrum Direct, Inc., No. C08-1733JLR, 2009 WL 10676393, at 18 *4 (W.D. Wash. July 1, 2009) (three month delay), citing Valeo Intellectual Prop., Inc. v. Data
 19 Depth Corp., 368 F. Supp. 2d 1121, 1128 (W.D. Wash. 2005) (four month delay); but see Bundy 20 Am., LLC v. Hawkeye Transportation, No. C09-817Z, 2009 WL 10676371, at *6–7 (W.D. Wash.
 21 Dec. 1, 2009) (finding ten-month delay to be reasonable under the circumstances involving 22 breach of covenant not to compete).

23 II. Plaintiff Has Not Demonstrated Irreparable Harm to Justify a Preliminary 24 Injunction more than One Year after Initiating Suit.

25 The Court should deny Plaintiff’s motion for a preliminary injunction ordering his DACA 26 and employment authorization reinstated. That Plaintiff has waited more than one year since 27 initiating suit to bring this motion undercuts his ability to demonstrate that he faces an immediate 28 threatened injury that must be addressed by this Court before the merits are decided. Lydo

1 Enters., Inc., 745 F.2d at 1213. Plaintiff provides no viable explanation for this delay, nor are the 2 injuries that Plaintiff alleges sufficient to justify a preliminary injunction.¹ Because Plaintiff has 3 incurred numerous of the irreparable injuries he alleges for over the past year and has 4 specifically not sought injunctive relief, Plaintiff can no longer establish the immediacy of the 5 injuries that he alleges and any relief that Plaintiff obtains should only come after a ruling on the 6 merits.

7 Indeed, the main thrust of Plaintiff's motion is his allegation that he cannot benefit from 8 the Northern District of California's preliminary injunction enjoining the Government's orderly 9 wind-down of the DACA policy. See Dkt. No. 122 at 1-2; 22-23. There are two problems with 10 this contention. First, Mr. Ramirez never sought a preliminary injunction when the wind-down of 11 the DACA policy was first announced. Second, Plaintiff may benefit from that injunction now in 12 place, as he may file a new initial DACA request. See Pltf's Exhibit C, Dkt. No. 122-1 at 38 ("If 13 you previously received DACA and your DACA expired before Sept. 5, 2016, or your DACA 14 was previously terminated at any time, you cannot request DACA as a renewal (because renewal 15 requests typically must be submitted within one year of the expiration date of your last period of 16 deferred action approved under DACA), but may nonetheless file a new initial DACA request in 17 accordance with the Form I-821D and Form I-765 instructions."). Additionally, Plaintiff also 18 could have sought employment authorization based on his then pending application for 19 cancellation of removal in his removal proceedings, see 8 C.F.R. 274a.12(c)(10), but failed to do 20 so. Thus, even this purported "new" development does not change the fact that Plaintiff has not 21 sought a preliminary injunction to address alleged ongoing irreparable harms for over one-year.
 22 Additionally, at least in part, rather than take steps to address his alleged injuries, including his 23 fear and anxiety, Plaintiff has taken no affirmative action.

24 Plaintiff also alleges irreparable injury because "the deprivation of constitutional rights 25 'unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.'" Dkt. No. 122 at 21 (citations omitted). However,

26
 27 ¹ Plaintiff's continued allegations regarding the lawfulness of his detention are similarly affected 28 by Plaintiff having sat on his rights. As Defendants previously argued, "Not only did Petitioner fail to request a bond hearing, but when the immigration court scheduled a bond hearing, his attorneys contacted the immigration court and requested that it be cancelled." Dkt. No. 52 at 2.

1 even if the Court found a violation of Plaintiff's Fifth Amendment due process rights, the Court
 2 here must consider the nature the injury to Plaintiff. Here, unlike in Hernandez v. Sessions, 872 3 F.3d 976, 994 (9th Cir. 2017), or Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012), 4 Plaintiff is not detained. Rather, where the nature of Plaintiff's constitutional claim is procedural,
 5 and where the remedy is remand to USCIS for further proceedings, the nature of Plaintiff's 6 constitutional claim is distinguishable, and the Court should not find that the possible or likely 7 deprivation of Plaintiff's constitutional rights should directly result in a finding of irreparable 8 injury.

9 In this regard, Plaintiff's alleged injuries based on the accrual of unlawful presence, 10 alleged denial of access to public benefits, inability to earn income due to a lack of employment 11 authorization, and harm by separation from family, are insufficient to support Plaintiff's motion 12 for preliminary injunction. First, at the time that Plaintiff initially received DACA in 2013, he 13 had already accrued more than one year of unlawful presence; thus, the restoration of his DACA 14 has no impact on the effect of the unlawful presence he already accrued. See 8 U.S.C.
 15 §§ 1181(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) (ten-year bar to admission for those with over one year of unlawful 16 presence); 1182(a)(9)(B)(iii)(I) (excepting minors from the accrual of unlawful presence).

17 Second, while Plaintiff alleges that he can no longer access the same public benefits that 18 other DACA recipients with employment authorization may also be able to access, Plaintiff has 19 not established that he received such benefits prior to the termination of his DACA. Accordingly, 20 although Plaintiff is correct that he currently lacks the opportunity to access certain public 21 benefits, he fails to establish that his receiving those benefits would be a return to the status quo.
 22 The same goes for Plaintiff's claimed injury based on his present lack of employment 23 authorization. While Plaintiff does state that he wants to be able to work and support his family, 24 Plaintiff has never claimed to have been working at the time of his arrest. Rather, Plaintiff 25 himself states that he "left California and came to Washington to find work . . . I have been 26 looking for work ever since I got here." Dkt. No. 35-1 at ¶ 10. Moreover, as discussed further 27 below, where Plaintiff's employment authorization was subject to termination based on the 28 commence of removal proceedings and not specifically on the termination of his DACA, it is not

1 clear that Plaintiff can even succeed on the merits of his claims as they relate to employment 2 authorization, and it is employment authorization on which Plaintiff's claim to other public 3 benefits hinges, not DACA itself. Plaintiff is simply not entitled to employment authorization 4 during his removal proceedings. See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(a)(1)(ii).

5 Plaintiff also cannot show that that the termination of his DACA impacts him by 6 separating him from his family. In fact, he states that he "split [his] time between Washington 7 and California to spend time with [his] brother and son." Dkt. No. 122-1 ¶ 3. Rather, this alleged 8 harm stems from Plaintiff's fear that he "will be removed from the United States and taken away 9 from [his] relatives and [his] son." Id. ¶ 2. Plaintiff's removal from the United States, however, is 10 not at issue here, and Plaintiff has gone to great effort to distinguish the termination of his 11 DACA from a challenge to his removal proceedings. See Dkt. No. at 14-15 ("Mr. Ramirez is 12 challenging the non-discretionary actions taken at the time of his arrest and subsequent 13 questioning at the Tukwila detention office and detention at the Northwest Detention Center, 14 which led to the termination of his work authorization and DACA status."). If the Court were 15 now to consider Plaintiff's potential removal from the United States, especially now that his 16 removal order from an Immigration Judge is on appeal, the Court would be undermining its 17 determination that 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(a)(5), (b)(9), and (g), did not work here to strip this Court of 18 jurisdiction over Plaintiff's claims.²

19 Finally, where Plaintiff is a putative class member in a case pending before the U.S.
 20 District Court for the Central District of California in Inland Empire Immigration Youth 21 Collective, et al., v. Nielsen, et al., No. 5:17-02048 (C.D. Cal.), and that Court has taken those 22 plaintiffs' motions for class certification and preliminary injunctions under advisement after 23 hearing today, the Court should refrain from ruling on Plaintiff's motion because an order 24 certifying the class and enjoining the termination of class-members' DACA, would render 25 Plaintiff's claims here subject to dismissal, or at the least address his alleged injuries.

26 _____
 27 ² Defendants also note the recent decision of Castellar v. Nielsen, No. 17-CV-0491-BAS-BGS, 28 2018 WL 786742(S.D. Cal. Feb. 8, 2018), supports Defendants' previous arguments regarding the applicability of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(a)(5) and (b)(9) to channel jurisdiction over Plaintiff's claims to the courts of appeal.

III. Even after the Court's Denial of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, Plaintiff Cannot Establish a Likelihood of Success on the Merits.

A. Plaintiff Cannot Succeed on the Merits of his Employment Authorization Termination Claim.

Plaintiff is unable to succeed on the merits of his claims with regard to the termination of his employment authorization because, per agency regulations, employment authorization is automatically revoked upon the institution of removal proceedings, and there is sufficient process for Plaintiff to reapply for employment authorization once in removal proceedings. Employment authorization based on 8 C.F.R. § 274a.12(c), including employment authorization based on deferred action, is subject to automatic termination with the filing of an NTA with an immigration court. See 8 C.F.R. § 274a.14(a)(1)(ii); 8 C.F.R. §§ 1003.13, 1003.14. No notice or opportunity to respond is afforded to any deferred action recipient in this posture. See, e.g., Gupta v. Holder, No. 6:11-CV-1731, 2011 WL 13174873 at *1 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 31, 2011) (denying challenge to automatic EAD termination). Because automatic EAD termination upon the institution of removal proceedings is not dependent on operation of the DACA SOP, Plaintiff's claims of harm regarding EAD loss must fail. Further, the DACA SOP instructs USCIS to defer to existing law and regulations where there is any conflict with the SOP. See Dkt. No. 16-24 at 17, DACA SOP Chapter One ("Any provision of the [INA] or 8 C.F.R. found . . . to be in conflict with this SOP will take precedence over the SOP.").

Furthermore, Plaintiff is not prejudiced by the termination of his EAD. Zolotukhin v. Gonzales, 417 F.3d 1073, 1076 (9th Cir. 2005). Under DHS regulations, an individual whose EAD has been terminated due to the institution of removal proceedings may reapply for an EAD if he or she becomes eligible again under a category of 8 C.F.R. 274a.12(c). Only if employment authorization is granted again would the individual then be eligible to apply to their state authority for a driver's license or Social Security card. See Texas v. United States, 809 F.3d 134, 149 (5th Cir. 2015) (an individual's access to a Social Security number is predicated on possession of EAD, not DACA). Thus, were the Court to act to reinstate Plaintiff's DACA now or in a final judgment, Plaintiff could again request employment authorization on the basis of DACA. Accordingly, the peripheral benefits Plaintiff cites to illustrate the urgency of the relief he seeks are two steps removed from the relief this Court can grant.

B. Plaintiff Cannot Succeed on the Merits of his DACA Termination Claim.

First, Defendants' reliance on the NTA that ICE issued to Plaintiff is a reasonable basis for terminating DACA. Here, implicit in USCIS's issuance of a Notice of Action was the reliance that ICE had issued Plaintiff an NTA, with the knowledge that he had DACA, based on ICE's determination that Plaintiff no longer warranted a favorable exercise of prosecutorial discretion in the form of DACA. USCIS's reliance is supported by the proposition that the charges listed in an NTA are not dispositive of the reasons for issuing an NTA. DHS is under no obligation to charge an individual with anything more than unlawful presence. Addy v. Sessions, 696 F. App'x 801, 804 (9th Cir. 2017) (rejecting argument that petitioner should have been charged with removability under a different statute, because "[t]he Attorney General has prosecutorial discretion over the initiation of removal proceedings, and that discretion is not reviewable."). Rather, the decision to issue an NTA is based on the immigration officer's experience and information, and – most importantly – his or her discretion. See Hernandez v. Gonzales, 221 F. App'x 588, 589–90 (9th Cir. 2007) ("Absent evidence to the contrary, we presume that the immigration officers properly discharged their duties when issuing Hernandez's NTA.") (citations omitted). Notably, an NTA also need not include charges used to support the denial of relief from removal. Salviejo–Fernandez v. Gonzales, 455 F.3d 1063, 1066 (9th Cir. 2006) (denying due process claim where the BIA found petitioner ineligible for cancellation of removal based on a conviction not alleged in the NTA). Accordingly, there is no legal support for Plaintiff's argument that Defendants' reliance on unlawful presence was arbitrary and capricious.

Second, Defendants' actions are supported by Plaintiff's own statements. While Plaintiff brings in additional evidence to argue that Defendants' findings regarding his gang affiliations were incorrect, the ultimate question under APA review is whether substantial evidence before the agency supported the agency determination. Sandgathe v. Chater, 108 F.3d 978, 980 (9th Cir. 1997) (citation and internal quotations marks omitted) (defining substantial evidence for purposes of APA review as – “more than a mere scintilla but less than a preponderance; it is such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.”). Here, while Plaintiff takes issues with the characterization of his tattoo, Plaintiff’s own statements in response to questioning support such a substantial evidence finding. Notably, when asked about whether he is or was involved with gang activity, Plaintiff did not respond simply with a no, the record reflects that he responded “No not no more.” ICE Certified Administrative Record at 25. Plaintiff then stated that he “used to hang out with the Sureno’s in California,” “fled California to escape from the gangs,” and “still hangs out with the Paizas in Washington State.” Id. Those statements demonstrate substantial evidence to support Defendants’ findings because it was reasonable for Defendants to interpret Plaintiff’s statement about “hanging out” with the Surenos and Paizas based on his qualified response regarding his involvement with gang activity. That Plaintiff has experts that contest the nature of his tattoo, and that Plaintiff was not identified by background checks regarding gang membership does not undermine the reasonableness of Defendants’ determination based on Plaintiff’s own statements during subsequent questioning.

Third, Plaintiff’s argument that he is not subject to an egregious public safety (“EPS”) finding also fails. Plaintiff incorrectly reads the reference to “specified crime” in the SOP’s definition of EPS to exclude investigation of gang membership or gang affiliation, because such conduct does not constitute a “crime.” See Dkt. No. 122 at 14, n.10. Although gang membership is not a crime, it is specifically included as an issue that rises to the level of an EPS concern as EPS is defined in the 2011 NTA Memo which the DACA SOP directly refers to, and there is nothing to suggest that the EPS definition for purposes of the DACA SOP seeks to limit the EPS definition contained in the 2011 NTA guidance. See, e.g., Dkt. No. 78-2 at 91 (“The scope of criminal offenses deemed to be EPS are described in the November 7, 2011, NTA memorandum and the accompanying MOA between USCIS and ICE.”). And here, ICE’s questioning of Plaintiff and his responses to those questions would support the conclusion that Plaintiff falls within the SOP’s definition of EPS based on ICE’s own investigation of his newly admitted conduct. See Dkt. No. 109-2 at 5 (Defining EPS as “[a]ny case where routine systems and background checks indicate that an individual is under investigation for . . . crimes listed in the November 7, 2011, [NTA] memorandum. . . .”).

Finally, even if the Court found that Defendants violated the DACA SOP by considering his DACA to have terminated automatically as a result of NTA issuance, Plaintiff cannot show the necessary prejudice to prevail on this claim. Rather, for a court to intervene under United States ex rel. Accardi v. Shaughnessy, 347 U.S. 260 (1954) for violation of a procedural rule, Plaintiff must show prejudice from that violation. See, e.g., Otero v. Kelly, No. CV 16-090-TUC-CKJ, 2017 WL 3049356, at *7 (D. Ariz. July 18, 2017), citing United States v. Hernandez-Rojas, 617 F.2d 533, 535 (9th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 864 (1980) (INS’ failure to follow regulations requiring advising an arrested alien of his right to speak to his consul was not prejudicial and thus not a ground for challenging the conviction); Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1090-91 (9th Cir. 2013) (citations omitted), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 2877 (2014) (“Relief is available under the APA only for ‘prejudicial error. . . .’”); Alto v. Black, 738 F.3d 1111, 1127 (9th Cir. 2013) (stating that the relief available under the APA is “affirmation, reversal or remand of the agency action”). Because Plaintiff would not necessarily be afforded advance notice and an opportunity to respond to Defendants’ intended termination of his DACA on remand based on Defendants’ EPS finding, Plaintiff cannot show prejudice from the process he alleges was lacking in USCIS’s automatic termination of his DACA.³

Plaintiff’s constitutional claims regarding DACA termination fail for the same reason - Plaintiff cannot show that the lack of additional process he seeks has prejudiced him. See Zolotukhin, 417 F.3d at 1076; Ali v. United States, 849 F.3d 510, 515 (1st Cir. 2017) (“There is no reason to think that, if an evidentiary hearing occurred, USCIS would not continue to rely on its own official records contemporaneous to the 1999 interview, as well as Lewis’ signature

³ Plaintiff relies on an outdated version of the DACA SOP in support of his argument that DACA termination without notice is extremely rare. See Dkt. No. 122 at 3-4, citing Dkt. No. 78-6 (April 2013 DACA SOP). Plaintiff acknowledged this much when he filed his reply in support of his motion to dismiss, and attached selection from the August 2013 version of the SOP at Dkt. No. 109-2. That version of the SOP identifies two scenarios where DACA may be terminated without notice – where a DACA recipient is deemed an Egregious Public Safety Concern, or where a DACA recipient is deemed an enforcement priority. See Dkt. No. 109-2 at 14-15.

1 affirming what appears to be her own handwritten statement”). Like in Ali, Plaintiff has not 2 given any reason to think that additional process would result in a different outcome.
 3 Accordingly, Plaintiff cannot succeed on the merits of his due process claim because Plaintiff 4 cannot show additional process likely to result in a different outcome of Defendants’ exercise of 5 discretion.

6 IV. The Remaining Preliminary Injunction Factors Favor Defendants.

 8 Where the Government is the opposing party, the balance of equities and public 9 interest factors merge. Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009). Defendants have strong 10 interests in enforcing U.S. immigration laws effectively and consistent with the statutory 11 removal scheme. See Reno v. Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. (“AADC”), 525 U.S.
 12 471, 490 (1999) (“There is always a public interest in prompt execution of removal 13 orders [to end] a continuing violation of United States law.”).

14 Moreover, Plaintiff’s effort to reinterpret DHS’s consistent position regarding 15 NTA issuance and DACA and EAD terminations would create absurd results. Requiring 16 the reinstatement of DACA and employment authorization would be contrary to DHS 17 regulations regarding the termination of employment authorization upon the institution of 18 removal proceedings. Further, the efficacy of the additional process that Plaintiff seeks is 19 questionable because DHS and its components have already exercised prosecutorial 20 discretion to terminate Plaintiff’s DACA by deciding instead to place him into removal 21 proceedings – regardless of his original or asserted continued ability to meet the threshold 22 criteria to request DACA. This interest is compounded by the fact that Plaintiff now has 23 an order of removal from the immigration court that he has appealed to the Board of 24 Immigration Appeals.

25 CONCLUSION

26 For the aforementioned reasons, the Court should deny Plaintiff’s motion for 27 preliminary injunction.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that on February 26, 2018, I electronically filed the foregoing document with the Clerk of the Court using CM/ECF. I also certify that the foregoing document should automatically be served this day on all counsel of record via transmission of Notices of Electronic Filing generated by CM/ECF.
